Please support the right of consumers to keep their phone numbers when they switch wireless phone carriers.

Wireless carriers threaten revocation of Cell numbers as a way of keeping consumers from switching from lousy or expensive service.

The bottom line is, does the Bush Administration really believe in supporting the consumer, does it really believe that the market should rule, or does it believe in supporting its large donors, the telecom companies, in a way that clearly goes against consumer interests.

If Michael Powell has larger political aspirations, is it wiser for him to side with the voters of the donors?

I hope you will do what's right, and back the voters
